

	Norman J. Radow College of Humanities and Social Sciences
	Interdisciplinary Studies – Undergraduate Comparative American Studies, Minor

Upon completion of this degree from KSU, students will be able to:

1. Identify the influence of culture on their experiences to analyze how cultural and social contexts affect their perspectives.
2. Research diverse U.S. social and cultural groups, considering their historical and contemporary experiences.
3. Evaluate various forms of source material, including scholarly and popular multimedia texts.
4. Assess the place of the U.S. in the diverse realm of societies across the globe.
5. Consider and engage with multiple points of view.
6. Synthesize research, experiences, and personal reflections to create a project articulating the student's understanding of the U.S. and their place in it.